

Digital Property Logbooks for Lawyers

The Home Buying & Selling Reform consultation confirms that digital logbooks are key to faster, smarter conveyancing.

Lawyers who adopt them now lead the way in client transparency and efficiency.

The Challenge for Law Firms

Too much time is still lost to repetitive data requests, paper deeds, and outdated records.

Digital logbooks solve this, creating an 'always-on' store of conveyancing-grade information ready for reuse.

A Digital Deeds Storeroom

Think of a logbook as a modern, digital version of your deeds storeroom.

It safely stores title documents, searches, warranties, and key data that is instantly accessible by clients and lawyers.

Client Retention Through White- Label Logbooks

Set up a white-labelled logbook for your purchaser clients at completion.

This captures the client long-term. When they come to sell again, you remain their first point of contact.

Why This Matters Now

The property industry is moving rapidly toward digital, client-owned logbooks

Agents, lawyers, and panel managers are already adopting new data-sharing standards that improve speed, compliance, and client experience.

Now is the time for lawyers to engage and strengthen their client relationships.

Always-On Data for Faster Transactions

hop's logbook integrates verified data sources —
EPC, title, planning, and more.

That means conveyancing-ready data from day one,
with fewer delays and less duplication.

Build Trust. Build Loyalty.

A white-labelled digital deeds storeroom positions your firm as transparent, modern, and client-focused.

It strengthens the lawyer-client relationship of trust that underpins the best legal services.
